Often it's the little things on a site that you remember, the details that bring everything together. This is what makes Bath Chew Valley stand out as a brilliant park.

There is a communal herb garden, a computer with free internet access and printing, tourist information brochures and a book library. These details give the site a friendly and relaxed atmosphere. Everyone is happy to have a chat, the staff included, and Tiger, the resident cat, is as likely to make himself at home in a pool of sunshine in your van as by the heater in reception.

The site also has excellent facilities. Rather than a large washblock, owner Keith Betton has installed a row of private washrooms. Each one has a shower, toilet, bath and mirror. And they are all heated for comfort in the cooler months. More are being built to increase the ratio to a washroom for every four pitches. Alongside the washrooms are a utility room with dishwashing sinks and a launderette.

The 35 pitches are gravel hardstandings with 16A electric hook-up, and some are fully serviced. They are separated by shrubs and flower beds and, to increase the space, cars are kept in a separate car park. Also on site you'll find an acre of woodland and a dog walk.

Gas exchange can be arranged on site but for basic provisions there is a shop within easy walking distance and a pub that serves good food if you don't fancy cooking in your van. Chew Valley Lake, which is excellent for fishing, is less than a mile away. There are also several walks in the local area – details are available from reception.

If you want to explore a bit more of the area, head to Bath. It's easy to while away a day admiring the romantic Georgian architecture, exploring the ancient Roman baths and rummaging among the boutique shops. Bristol is also a comfortable drive away and there are several National Trust properties nearby.

Bath Chew Valley's list of accolades also includes our award for Best Adults-Only Site. Visitors loved the site's atmosphere, facilities and the attention to detail that made their stay that bit more comfortable.

I appreciated the peace and lovely landscaping on this site. The washrooms were exceptional and the staff were friendly and efficient. I liked the fountain, the fish pond and the cat
